PLDW was ranked in the metropolitan level/Rhode Island for its work in the areas of government relations, securities/capital markets law, corporate law and criminal defense: white collar. The 2010 Best Law Firms list will be featured in the October print issue of U.S. News & World Report which will be available on Sept. 27, 2010. The list and selection methodology are available at www.usnews.com/bestlawfirms.

“U.S. News is the world’s leading publisher of institutional rankings based on both objective data and peer evaluations,” says Steven Naifeh, President of Best Lawyers. “We are combining this expertise with Best Lawyers’ experience of providing rankings of individual lawyers based on peer reviews for almost three decades. In August, all five partners at the law firm were announced as ‘best lawyers’ by Best Lawyers in America® for 2011, the oldest peer-review publication in the legal profession. Managing Partner Gary R. Pannone was recognized in multiple practice areas, including administrative law, corporate governance and compliance law, corporate law, mergers and acquisitions and nonprofit/charities law. William P. Devereaux was selected in the practice area of criminal defense law and white collar law, and William E. O’Gara for his expertise in labor and employment law. Matthew A. Lopes Jr. was named for his work in government relations law, and Teno A. West was also selected in the practice area of government relations law as well as in the subspecialties of municipal infrastructure and water law.

PLDW was founded in March 2006 by partners in an international law firm and is now recognized as one of the most distinguished law firms in the New England and New York regions.
